Privacy Policy

Educators for Social Justice (ESJ) wishes to protect your privacy. To that end we established a privacy policy to demonstrate ESJ's commitment to our members' and website users' privacy. This policy explains the types of information the ESJ website collects at www.educatorsforsocialjustice.org [1], and how ESJ uses this information.

What Personally Identifiable Information is Collected

ESJ members or others who register at www.educatorsforsocialjustice.org [1] are voluntarily providing contact information (such as name and e-mail address). ESJ will use this information for specific, limited purposes. Any registrant may opt-out, at any time to cease receiving ESJ communications. Those who opt-out will no longer be considered registrants.

IP addresses

ESJ uses IP addresses to help diagnose problems with ESJ's server, administer www.educatorsforsocialjustice.org [1], and for statistical metrics used to track website visitor traffic.

Cookies

www.educatorsforsocialjustice.org [1] uses cookies to provide better services. Cookies are used so the ESJ website recognizes who the visitor is along with the visitor's preferences based on how the visitor has previously interacted with the website. The cookie is placed and recorded in your website search history and accessed when a visitor re-accesses the ESJ website. Cookies allow ESJ access to information and features visitors seem particularly interested in. Cookies also track visitor's usage of www.educatorsforsocialjustice.org [1], so ESJ knows which parts of the website are most popular. Visitors may reject cookies or cancel them by instructing the visitor's own Web browser accordingly. ESJ will not be responsible for pre-emptively rejecting or canceling any visitor's cookies.

How Your Information May Be Used

ESJ uses registrants' and visitors' voluntarily granted information to provide visitors with optimized service; to send e-mail alerts; to answer requests; to process membership applications; etc. Registrants may choose to opt out at any time, which will cease all communications from ESJ. ESJ may also use registrants' and visitors' information to track access to the ESJ website. Such tracking allows ESJ to see which features are most popular so ESJ can optimize ESJ's, registrants' and visitors' needs. Such tracking also allows ESJ to aggregate data about website traffic to outside parties. However, such tracking is not knowingly done in a way as to identify any individual, but rather in a way to anonymously record how many visitors access which features and how visitors and registrants interact with the website.

Email Privacy

ESJ does not provide, sell, or rent email addresses to anyone outside the organization.
